President's Message

Leo R. Cullinan, D.D.S., M.S.

The Service Component of Access to Care

"When you embrace a conviction, when you make a commitment...

DON'T FLINCH, DON'T EVER FLINCH!"

(Leadership training, U.S. Military Academy, West Point, circa 1975)

Little did I know that 37 years later I would be invoking the same tenet I learned as a cadet to my dental colleagues in advancing a concept that will certainly challenge and with a little luck inspire. It's simple. I made a commitment to focus on the service component of Access to Care (A2C). I need your help, and I can't flinch. Making a case, by the numbers, may provide perspective.

We have been blessed today by an extraordinary opportunity few in this world will ever experience. If you shrank the world's population to a village of 100 people, with all existing human ratios remaining the same, there would be: 57 Asians, 21 Europeans, 14 from the Western hemisphere both north and south, and 8 Africans. 52 would be female, 48 would be male; 70 would be non-white, 30 would be white; 70 would be non-Christian, 30 would be Christian; 6 people would possess 59% of the wealth and be from the United States; 80 would live in substandard housing; 70 would be unable to read; 50 would suffer from malnutrition; one would be near death and one would be newborn...and one (yes only ONE) would have a college education. By extension, another fraction would go on to secure a dental degree with the ability to make a significant impact on the lives of so many people in need.

In June, 2012, the U.S. National Oral Health Alliance, under the auspices of the ADA held its third leadership colloquium in San Francisco. Their goal was to explore the barriers to Access to Care. Hundreds of people came together to talk about medical/dental collaboration, prevention and public health infrastructure, and oral health literacy. The overarching focus was the question, "What are we doing in the short and long term, both individually and collectively, to assure optimal oral health through prevention and treatment for underserved people?"

In the wake of the recent Supreme Court ruling on healthcare, the less than flattering expose on the PBS program Frontline ("Dollars & Dentists"), the powerful lobbying efforts of the insurance industry to "encourage" the "midlevel provider concept" in dentistry, and the FDA White Paper on Access to Care will it take a watershed moment for each of us to make a commitment to help those in need? We must juxtapose this concept of SERVICE with the realities of managed care. We cannot wait for the mandates; we must be proactive. I want to more clearly define our model and proudly proclaim..."THIS is how we take care of our own in the West Coast and in the State of Florida".

We have an incredible opportunity to do what we do best...help others. Without oversimplification or minimizing the impact of existing programs, we have the capacity and ability to solve this problem. It will take maximum participation from volunteer dentists and dental specialists. It will involve community awareness and support. And it most certainly will involve organized dentistry at every level.

It is impossible to mention Access to Care without the "service" component. To that end, I have formed an Access to Care Task Force charged with the following three sequential phases of action:

1. Phase I (Inventory Phase): Inventory of existing programs in each county and assessing not only the needs but also the level of involvement and support from local affiliates.
2. Phase II (Planning Phase): Combining the information collected in Phase I with our knowledge and experience to work with our affiliates to make existing programs stronger or start programs where they do not exist.
3. Phase III (Action Phase): Executing a plan to get all of our dentists and dental specialists involved working side by side with their fellow dentists in a collegial environment. The focus will be to provide comprehensive services, taking the burden off our oral surgery colleagues, and finding true value in being a member of organized dentistry AND the essence of serving those in need.

Through the years, I have witnessed the depth, sincerity and loyalty of a conviction...that of service. With the backdrop of overwhelming need for comprehensive dental services in our own backyard, I also realize we need to "think bigger" AND that I cannot do this alone, without your help.

I encourage each of you to take inventory and embrace the value of being part of something bigger through your service to those in need. The rewards will foster personal growth, bolster organized dentistry's position as leaders in oral health care, and encourage others to join our cause.

I look forward to visiting each affiliate over the next several months to report on our progress and personally ask for your help and commitment to serve, and to those non-members who want to get involved...our doors are always open to you.

Sincerely,
Leo R. Cullinan, D.D.S., M.S.

BUILDING PARTNERSHIPS TO BUILD HEALTHY SMILES

PDC@FNDC: A SUCCESSFUL PARTNERSHIP IN ACTION

A coalition of 11 partners provided $22,000 in dental care in two days. In June 2012, the FDA and its foundation (FDHF), partnered with the Department of Children and Families and the Department of Health and others to provide free dental services to 39 foster children in the Orange County area. This partnership continues as future events are being planned.

Consultant's Corner

The last weekend in July was a blast! The WCDDA holds a summer meeting at the Ritz-Carlton, Naples every year. I've heard about this get together for 20+ years from my clients and friends in dentistry. It is clear to me that their families have grown up with this tradition, meeting one another year after year at the beach. Casual. Friendly. Maybe even competitive, for those that run or golf.

Membership in an organization like the WCDDA offers many benefits. It was clear to me that the leaders are committed to the future of dentistry. Over the last several years I have seen how outreach programs have been created, fluoride has been argued before legislature and even coverage for one another in times of crisis are the result of being a member of the West Coast District Dental Association. I am in awe of the level of professionalism that this organization represents.

Thank you WCDDA for supporting one another. I am honored to be a provider of Leadership training for your membership.

Another of Laura's Favorite Things...

Membership with the American Academy of Dental Office Managers is one of the best investments a dentist can make in the office manager and business assistants. This organization is counting down the days to its annual meeting in Scottsdale, AZ, September 6-8, 2012. There are only 25 spots remaining! They promise great speakers, an 80's karaoke night and fellowship for these very influential people on your team. Two years ago, this organization began bestowing Fellowship status on those members who showed exceptional leadership qualities and each year, there is a spotlight on the Office Manager of the Year. To learn more about the meeting or the benefits of membership, find them on the web at www.dentalmanagers.com.

CMS Softens Enrollment Requirement in New Medicare Rule: The ADA scored a significant victory recently when a final rule issued by HHS's Center for Medicare and Medicaid Services exempted dentists from a requirement in the Affordable Care Act that providers who refer Medicare patients to specialists must sign up for the federal program. The ADA objected when the agency first proposed the rule in 2010, arguing that requiring dentists to enroll in a government program that they normally do not bill would constitute an undue burden. CMS officials agreed, and the final rule, expressly excludes dentist referrals to specialists from the rule. Dentists are not completely free of the ACA Medicare requirements, however. Referring a Medicare patient for reimbursable lab work, for instance, will require a dentist to enroll in the program. Ordering durable medical equipment, imaging or home health will also trigger the requirement to enroll, according to the rule. The ADA sought a dentist exclusion from these requirements as well, but the agency declined that request. In any case, these requirements should affect only a small population of dentists. Information about enrolling for purposes of ordering and certifying is available at <http://www.cms.gov/MedicareProviderSupEnroll>.

New Studies Question the Economic Viability of Midlevel Providers in Dentistry: The ADA released six reports that raise questions about the economic viability of three alternative workforce models: the Dental Health Aide Therapists (DHATs) currently providing care in Alaska Native territories, the Dental Therapists (DTs), currently working in Minnesota, and the proposed but as yet unrealized Advanced Dental Hygiene Practitioner (ADHP). In a statement, ADA president William Calnon, D.D.S., said that the studies "represent a new way of examining whether midlevel providers are an economically viable way to improve access to dental care for underserved populations." He emphasized that the reports are "a first step, and not the last word." The ADA released a statement which can be located at http://www.ada.org/epubs/assets/july_statement_on_ecg_studies.pdf.

ADA on Track in Aiding State Societies, Supreme Court Ruling on Health Law Changes Nothing for Dental: The United States Supreme Court ruling on the Affordable Care Act (ACA) means that the states will go forward with implementing the health care exchanges required by the law to be operational on Jan. 1, 2014. The ADA and its constituent societies are well-positioned to ensure that oral health coverage is available through the state "exchanges," through which individuals and small businesses will be able to purchase health coverage. The Association has developed a number of tools that state societies can use to prepare themselves and their members for full implementation of the exchanges. For more information on these tools and what your state society is doing about health care reform, please contact The Florida Dental Association at (850) 681-3629.

New ADA/NACHC Program Urges Collaboration between Clinic Dentists And Private-Practice Counterparts: Believing that collaboration between private practice dentists and their counterparts in community health centers is an important part of any long-term strategy to improve access to oral health care for underserved populations, the American Dental Association has teamed up with the National Association of Community Health Centers to increase awareness among their members of the importance of working together. The message the associations are bringing to their members is essentially one of efficiency: "Increasing contractual relations between health centers and private dentists is a viable option for health centers that wish to establish or expand their oral health service capacity," wrote ADA President William Calnon, D.D.S. and NACHC President Thomas Van Coverden in a letter to their state affiliates. Private contracting offers advantages to all parties. Health center patients benefit because quality care can be quickly and efficiently delivered, alleviating much of the backlog experienced by many health center dental programs. Health centers are able to meet their patients' oral health needs without the costly capitalization expenditures of building and maintaining additional dental operatories. Private practitioners benefit because they can participate in providing care to underserved populations without having to contend with many of the administrative issues of the Medicaid program. With the substantial expansion of health centers over the past decade and the expectation of further growth under the current health care reform law, the ADA and NACHC believe there will be ample opportunities for collaboration. Individual dentists could mentor clinic directors, while clinics could benefit by using retired dentists who wish to continue to use their skills while helping their communities. At a more global level, improved collaboration could encourage state dental societies and state primary care associations to explore joint advocacy on issues of common ground. For more information on this initiative, please contact Tom Spangler, senior director, legislative and regulatory policy, government and public affairs, at govtpol@ada.org.

The Last Word

"When you're finished changing, you're finished." – Ben Franklin

Steve Zuknick, DMD

That quote can be applied to so many different things: individuals, dental offices or even dental associations. It's that last one I'd like to address. I read an eye-opening book recently called The End of Membership as We Know It, by Sarah L. Sladek. In it she details how membership organizations must change or risk becoming irrelevant and subsequently extinct. So, what is changing? The short answer is...we are. That is, our wishes, our values, and our traits are changing. Collectively those changes and traits lump us into our respective generation.

Every one of us knows there are major generational differences. Unless you have done some reading on the topic you mainly know your generation, and you assume yours does it the "right" way. Interestingly, no one generation is doing it better than the other. They are just doing it differently. Membership organizations must adapt and cater to all generations. There is a common misconception that the youngest generations are unmotivated or apathetic slackers. Sladek points out that the values gen X and Y'ers search for in an association are "focused on these primary objectives: (1) the opportunity to lead, (2) the opportunity to learn, and (3) the opportunity to make a difference." Hardly the defining traits of slackers. Boomers join associations without questioning its value, it's seen as the "right thing to do." X and Y generations need to see the value. They are the products of divorce and have never known job security. Spending money on an association membership will only occur if the value proposition is great enough. That's not irresponsible, but really smart.

As an association we must provide value to our newest recruits who will far outnumber the baby boomers. My value proposition to you begins with a simple question: what would the practice of dentistry be like without organized dentistry? You cannot put a price on the advocacy that is occurring on our behalf every single day, but let's set that aside for a moment and see how well the three values mentioned above are accomplished. Membership in "your" association provides more than ample opportunities to lead and learn, one just needs to search them out. Perhaps one avenue where organized dentistry excels is providing an opportunity to make a difference. From Give Kids a Smile to the newly formed committee on Access to Care, you simply need to say "I'm here" to make a difference. I can't take credit for the next line, but whether your generation thinks iced tea is a drink, a rapper, or just an actor, make the commitment to accept the value provided in becoming (or remaining) a member. Feel free to contact me in any of the following generationally specific modes - email: sjzdmd@aol.com; telephone: 813-654-2500; letter: 1114 Kyle Wood Lane, Brandon, FL 3351; or just grab me at a meeting.
